Its a black bear by the rounded snout. Grizzlyls have very pronounced blunt snout and block head. Most likely taxi, its odd position certainly a modification by flood. After fires, unlikely anything like that in the flood plain if it existed at all on the front side.

Oh no there's a bear on my beach!!! NOOOOOOOOOPE, Chuck Testa.

SBZZ JAN 12, 2018 07:46 PM
That thing could have floated in from anywhere. Zoo?

ODDS BODKIN JAN 12, 2018 06:41 PM
Head does not look like Grizzly. Black bear (what we also call Brown bear.)

A-1515852076 JAN 12, 2018 04:22 PM
Too funny. When I first saw this same photo couple days ago I thought, "Hmm. Isn't that a Grizzly bear?" It didn't really register, though, and I thought this poor bear had been caught in the flood. I love all the comments here. Do people around here actually have large taxidermied trophy kills? I thought that was only for the yahoos in Wyoming and Idaho, etc.

And, I LOVE the "graphic image" warning, but they put the dead bear image in the feature picture for the article.... can't look away...

D8VANILLA JAN 12, 2018 03:43 PM
Apparently, local Montecito resident, Rob Lowe took this picture..

SBMH2015 JAN 12, 2018 06:25 PM
Rob Lowe did not take this picture. He posted it yesterday on his Instagram but it was on another users social media account 3 days ago. Looks fake to me.

ROGER JAN 12, 2018 05:47 PM
touchy...

TAGDES JAN 12, 2018 03:54 PM
Rob doesn't take pics, he poses for them fearlessly battling wildfires with a garden hose in a mandatory evacuation area whilst the hired help whips up some delish spaghetti . It's all yours R.& R....

DUCKY JAN 12, 2018 03:32 PM
Trophy bear...

YETI JAN 12, 2018 02:01 PM
Completely FAKE..IF this were real, the bear would be surrounded by thousands of pieces of debris that washed out with it.

REX OF SB JAN 12, 2018 04:06 PM
I'm sure there would also be lots of flies and seagulls hanging around. I think the rainbow is a nice touch, though.

JAN 12, 2018 01:55 PM
My gosh, we have some sharp eyed photo analysts here. Let's wait until someone can eyeball it up close.

A-1515852076 JAN 12, 2018 01:55 PM
So the title isn't wrong, technically it is a dead bear. Just dead a long time ago.

STEAMBOAT1 JAN 12, 2018 01:15 PM
Lets be real here, that thing is a taxidermy bear. It is in way to stiff, and good of a condition to be actually from the mountains and taken out.

TAGDES JAN 12, 2018 01:02 PM
Grizzly, longer claws and dished face profile. So obviously not from around here.

A-1515852076 JAN 12, 2018 12:45 PM
How will they know for sure if it's a real bear or a stuffed bear? Can anyone tell if it's a grizzly or black bear?

420722 JAN 12, 2018 02:26 PM
Hmm. When they do an autopsy it will either have fake stuffing or real organs. That ought to be enough to make the call.

SPEARO JAN 12, 2018 12:37 PM
Taxidermy, mounted in a mid-stride pose

A-1515852076 JAN 12, 2018 12:32 PM
Looks like a taxidermy museum bear. Too stiff for rigor mortis.???

MTNDRIVER JAN 12, 2018 02:47 PM
Agreed, taxidermist at work, probably washed out of someone's house.
